

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT WITH PETS

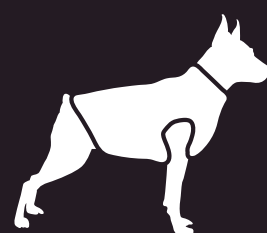

TRAVELING

Carriers & Harnesses

Whether traveling by car, train, or plane, it's important to think about how you will transport your pet and keep them safe. A carrier (with enough room for them to change position) is always a great option, but if you're looking to travel light there are car harnesses that strap your pet in to keep them safe in the event of a crash.

Cold Weather Gear

If you are traveling somewhere cold, have you gotten your dog a jacket and shoes to protect them from the elements? Jackets provide warmth needed by shorthair breeds. Boots stop snow, ice, melting salt, and other debris from building up between a dog's paw pads, which can cause painful cuts and sores.

Treating Anxiety

If your pet has travel anxiety you should speak with your veterinarian about anti-anxiety tips or possibly exploring medication. It will give peace of mind to you and your pet!

Travel Requirements

Have you looked into the pet travel requirements for your destination state or country? They sometimes require blood tests, vaccinations, microchips, or health certificates! Make sure you look into requirements ASAP so you can contact us to help you prepare what you need!
